

RIT BUT D APPEAL

NEWMAN TO CERTIFY WRIT OF ERROR TO U. S. SUPREME COURT

Although Losing in U. S. District Court, Frank Wins Point by Getting Case Before Highest Court

ON COURT'S CALENDAR

This Means That the Execution of Frank Will Be Stayed

Indefinitely or Until Higher Court Acts

Judge W. T. Newman, of the United States district court, on Saturday denied the application for a writ of habeas corpus.

Indefinitely or Until Higher Court Acts

Judge W. T. Newman, of the United States district court, on Saturday denied the application for a writ of habeas corpus brought by Attorneys Henry Peoples and Hugh H. Alexander in behalf of Leo M. Frank.

But in denying the application, Judge Newman granted the attorneys temporary leave to appear before him to ask Frank the right to appeal his action to the United States supreme court, which they will do.

Judge Newman announced his decision immediately after the conclusion of the arguments by the petitioning attorneys and without calling on the state—as represented by Solicitor Hugh Dorsey and Attorney General Warren—to present their side of the case.

When Mr. Alexander concluded, Judge Newman remarked:

"When this application was presented to me, I asked the solicitor general and the attorney general to be present at the hearing. However, it is unnecessary to hear from them. This matter has been tried in the state courts. The state supreme court held that it did not present a federal question, or if one had been presented it should have

When Mr. Alexander concluded, Judge Newman remarked:

"When this application was presented to me, I asked the solicitor general and the attorney general to be present at the hearing. I thought it was necessary to hear from them. This matter has been tried in the state courts, and the state supreme court has decided. I did not present a federal question, or if one had been presented it should have been embodied in the motion for a writ."

"This decision was taken before the justices of the United States supreme court and justice Brandeis has ruled that it is for the states to determine the method of practice, and that the federal supreme state courts was a matter of practice and procedure, not a federal question. The status of the case seems to be the same here as when it came to the state supreme court."

When Mr. Alexander concluded, Judge Newman remarked:

"When this application was presented to me, I asked the attorney general, and the attorney general to be present at the hearing. However, it is unnecessary to have him here. The applicant has been tried in the state courts, and the state supreme court has affirmed the conviction. I do not present a federal question, or if one has been presented it should have been embodied in the application for a writ."

This decision was taken before the issuance of the United States supreme court decision in Ex parte Lanham and Holmes. It is held that it is for the purpose of the method of practice, and that the way we do it in this country is the matter of practice and involved no federal question. The state of the case seems to be the same here as in the case presented to the United States supreme court. In view of the fact that the jurisdiction or the power to grant the writ has been allowed, follow that the petition is denied."

APPEAL ALLOWED.

People's Counsel immediately on his feet and inquired if Judge Newman would be so good as to grant a writ of habeas corpus to the applicant. Judge Newman said Solicitor Dornier if he wished to take the case to the United States supreme court.

When Mr. Alexander concluded, Judge Frank asked:

"When this application was presented to you, did you make any effort to find out the grounds upon which the attorney general is to present at the hearing. However, it is unnecessary to hear it in the state court if the state government has already decided not to present a federal question, or if it has been agreed that the question has been embodied in the motion for a new trial."

This decision was taken before the justices of the United States supreme court had heard the case. Judge Frank stated that it is for the state to determine the method of presenting the question. What was done in the state courts was a matter of practice and involved no legal question. The state court, he seems to be the same here as when it came to the United States supreme court. In view of this, I have not the right to ask the attorney general to write. It is, therefore, followed that the attorney general is allowed.

Attorney Peoples was immediately on his feet and insisted that the state would certify an appeal to the United States supreme court. Judge Newman asked Squire whether he would present any objection to allowing such an appeal. He said that he would not, and he said that he would not present a new proposition and he did not know whether or not he would be able to do more than object. He said he would not be allowed until Tuesday to examine the case. He said that he was not entitled to a new trial, and he said that he was to be denied and the state wished to have the case in the event the state had discretion.

When this application was presented to the court, the solicitor general and the attorney general to be heard at the hearing. However, it is unnecessary to hear the solicitor general, as he has been tried in the state courts. The state supreme court held that it did not present a federal question, and has been presented it should have been embodied in the application for a writ.

The decision was taken before the justices of the United States supreme court, and Justices Lamar and Holmes dissented. The solicitor general followed the method of practice, and that which was done in the state courts was the matter to be presented to the federal question. The status of the case seems to be the question of the jurisdiction to the United States supreme court.

In view of this, I have not the jurisdiction of the solicitor general to write. It, therefore, follows that the petition is granted.

APPEAL ALLOWED.

Amateur Peoples was immediately on his feet and instantly the solicitor general would certify an appeal to the United States supreme court. The solicitor general asked Solicitor Dorsey if he wished to enter any objection to allowing such an appeal. He said that he had no new proposition and he did not know of any objection to the appeal. He said more than he ought. He said he would like to be allowed until Tuesday to examine the case. He said that he would like to be allowed until Tuesday to examine the case. He said that he would like to be allowed until Tuesday to examine the case.

He said if Frank was not entitled to a writ, he would not be allowed to be denied and the state wished to object in the event the court had discretion.

Mr. Dorsey then took his seat, and the solicitor general said that he would allow the appeal.

JUDGMENT STAYED.

Judge Frank then acted in allowing the appeal places the Frank case before the United States supreme court and automatically operates to stay the execution sentence of the state supreme court. The solicitor has disposed of it.

It is now that the solicitor general has disposed of it.

When Mr. Alexander concluded, Judge Newsum remarked:

"When this application was presented to me, I asked the attorney general and the Attorney General to be present at the hearing. However, it is unnecessary to have them here. It has already been tried in the state courts. The state supreme court has already rendered a decision. I am not going to entertain a question, or if I have been presented it should have been submitted to the state supreme court."

This decision was taken before the Justice of the United States Supreme Court, Chief Justice Lamar and Holman, held that it was not necessary to submit the method of practice, and that the state supreme court had already decided the matter of practice and involved no federal question. The status of the case would be as if the case had been sent to the United States supreme court. In view of the fact that the jurisdiction or the power to grant the writ was not involved, follow that the petition is denied."

APPEAL ALLOWED

The United States supreme court immediately on his feet and inquired if Judge Newman would appeal. Judge Newman said that he would not. The United States supreme court Judge Newsum asked Solicitor Dorse if he wished to appeal. The solicitor said this was a matter of practice and involved no federal question. The state was prepared to do more than object. He said he would examine into the state's rights in the case. The solicitor said that he would object to the right of appeal, he would like for it to be decided by the state supreme court. The object in the event the court had discretion.

Dorsey then took his seat, and Judge Newman announced that he would not appeal.

EXECUTION STAYED

Judge Newman's action in allowing the state supreme court to stay the execution on the calendar of the United States supreme court, is a precedent that operates to stay the execution sentence until the United States supreme court decides the case.

It is probable that the case will be decided by the state supreme court in the next thirty or sixty days, as is the custom of the state supreme court to give criminal cases the right of way at the expense of being long delay.

NEW SUMMER SIGHTS

It is less money paid in Judge Newman's case. The state supreme court was in public court room, and in addition to Frank's lawyers, there were several

When Mr. Alexander concluded, Judge Newman remarked:

"When this application was presented to me, I asked the attorney general and the Attorney General to be present at the hearing. However, it is unnecessary to hear them. The application has been tried in the state courts. The state supreme court held that it did not present a federal question. The case has been presented it should have been submitted in the state courts."

This decision was taken before the meeting of the United States supreme court, and Justices Lamar and Holmes said that it is for the state courts to determine the method of practice, and that what was done in the state courts was proper. It is for the state courts to decide the federal question. The status of the case seems to be the question, as it is not yet in the United States supreme court. In view of this, I have not the right to make any statement on the subject. It, therefore, follows that the petition is not proper."

APPEAL ALLOWED.

Attorney Peoples was immediately on his feet and insisted that the United States supreme court certify an appeal to the United States supreme court. Judge Newman said that he would not allow him to enter any objection to allowing such an appeal, but that he would not allow a new proposition and he did not know whether the state was prepared to do so. He said that he would not allow it to be allowed until Tuesday to give him time to consider the matter. He said if Frank was not entitled to the right of appeal, he would like for it to be decided by the state supreme court in the event the court had discretion.

Mr. Dorsey then took his seat, and Judge Newman announced that he would not allow the appeal.

EXECUTION STAYED.

Judge Newman, after allowing the appeal places the Frank case regularly on the calendar of the United States supreme court. The United States supreme court operates to stay the execution sentence in the Frank case. The state supreme court has disposed of it.

It is probable that the case will be heard by the United States supreme court next thirty or sixty days, as it is the custom of the United States supreme court to give criminal cases the right of way in cases of less urgency.

FRANK NEVER SIDETRACKED.

It being motion day in Judge Newman's court, the hearing was held in the morning. The case was heard by the Frank lawyers, there were several witnesses, and the case was heard by the state supreme court on Tuesday. The case was heard by the state supreme court on Tuesday at 10 o'clock.

Judge Newman announced that he had agreed to the motion of the Frank lawyers, to give the Frank people the right of appeal. He then announced that he would not allow the motion on the calendar, and he then proposed to sound these other motions on the calendar. The hearing consumed twenty minutes.

The hearing of the Frank petition commenced, with the

When Mr. Alexander concluded, Judge Newman remarked:

"When this application was presented I asked whether it was necessary to have the Attorney General to be present at the hearing. However, it is unnecessary to bring him here because he has been tried in the state courts. If the council met and decided that it did not present a federal question, or if one had been presented it should have been decided long ago."

The decision was taken before the justices of the United States supreme court, and Justices Lamar and Holmes agreed with the majority. The opinion of the majority stated that it was a matter of practice and involved no federal question. The status of the case would be the same as if it were presented to the United States supreme court. Jurisdiction or the power to grant the writ, it therefore, follows that the petition failed.

APPEAL ALLOWED

Attorney Peoples immediately ran to his feet and inquired if Judge Newman would assist an appeal to the United States supreme court. He said that Solicitor Dorey if he wished to make an appeal, he must do so now. The solicitor said this was a new proposition and he did not know whether it should be made more than once. He said he would examine the state's rights in the case, and if he found them to be in the right of the appeal, he would like for it to be denied and the state wished to take its case to the United States supreme court.

Dorey then took his seat and Judge Newman announced that he would allow the appeal.

DECISION STAYED

Judge Newman stated in allowing the appeal that he would stay the execution on the calendar of the United States supreme court and automatically suspend the sentence until the United States supreme court could hear the case.

It is probable that the case will be heard by the supreme court within the next few days. It is expected that the custom of the court to give criminal cases precedence over civil cases of less urgency.

OTHER CASES SIDETRACKED

On Wednesday day in Judge Newman's court, the hearing was held in the case of Frank's lawyers, there were several cases pending in the court. Judge Newman announced that he had called the case of Frank's lawyers, to give the Frank people a chance to present their motions on the calendar, and he then proceeded to sound these other motions on the calendar. The hearing consumed twenty minutes.

The first motion being the reading of the petition commenced, with Attorney Peoples, who was assisted by Alexander, expanded, prepared and filed it.

The second motion was presented by Attorney Peoples, who was assisted by Alexander, and counsel for Frank, were in the court room, but as spectators rather than participants. Judge Newman stated this particular phase of the legal battle.

The state was represented at the hearing by Solicitor Hugh M. Dorey, his assistant, J. S. Starnes, and Attorney General Warren Grice.

MOTION FOR REHEARING CITED

When Attorney Peoples finished reading the petition, Judge Newman asked the attorneys for the state to present in support of the legal points asserted.

Attorney Peoples said he doubted the necessity of citing authorities in view of the fact that the state had already raised to the issuance of the writ.

He then cited the authorities in support of the authorities if Attorney Peoples had any, and Attorney Peoples thereupon withdrew from the case.

After doing this, Attorney Peoples left the courtroom.

The state then presented a few motions which Judge Newman asked whether any federal question had been raised in the case.

Peoples replied that no such questions

ZACHRY WRITES OF B. U. S. CHRISTMAS EXERCISES

Students of Other Schools Invited to Attend Annual Speaking Contest

BY WALLACE F. ZACHRY.

The annual Boys' High school Christmas exercises are to be held this year at the auditorium on Monday, December 21, at 11 o'clock. Besides the B. U. S. students, the students of Tech High school, the young ladies of the girls' high school, English-Commercial high school and Washington seminary have been invited to attend the exercises. The boys of the second seventh grade of the grammar schools have also been extended a warm invitation.

The exercises this year promise to be of the highest quality. The students have been awarded, one for the best debate, given by Walter A. Burke, and one for the best oration, given by A. J. Johnson. There is sure to be a hard fight for these medals by the contestants, who have been training hard for the exercises.

The declaimers are all speakers of known ability. Walter P. Binns, of the Robert L. Foreman, Jr., of the juniors; William C. of the sophomores; Edwin Williams, of the freshmen class. In this contest the contestants point to a neck-and-neck struggle between Walter Binns and Robert Foreman, with the other class being behind. Binns won the debate; Foreman won the oration. Both are well known speakers from this number is practically impossible, though Girardeau, Stokes and Courts seem to have a slight edge on the others. At any rate, the debate is sure to be a hotly contested affair.

Also will be furnished by the U. S. orchestra, and will greatly add to the entertainment. With such a program this year exercises should prove the best yet.

Fair Street Pupils Enjoy Study of Gave Men

Students of the Fair Street school have been studying the Christmas holidays, but some are not keeping us from enjoying our lessons.

Second grade A is reading the "Gave Men" and enjoy it very much. Miss Harrison, our music director, was with them, and she was much pleased with the work.

We are very proud of some of our very excellent work. Several of our classes have done very well. "The Wedding" and "The Game" were especially well done.

Best wishes to every one for a happy Christmas.

NORMAL SCHOOL SOCCER TEAM WINS EVERY GAME

Interesting Program Marks Annual Christmas Exercises

BY LAURA BIRNS.

The pupils of the sixth grade A visited the Burns club last week. They enjoyed the game, played games and had a fine time.

Wednesday the boys of the soccer team played a game against the Peeples school. They defeated Peeples by a score of 10 to 0. Peeples had a very good game, but they were not as good as the Normal school.

Friday the girls of the basketball team played a game against W. F. Slater school. They defeated Slater by a score of 15 to 10 for the first time. The second team defeated them with a score of 10 to 5. The basketball team has played six games and out of the six they have won five. W. F. Slater school was the first school we played. They defeated us in that game but we even won the game.

The children of the seventh grade A have a very interesting program. The exercises of the Normal school were as follows:

Speech—Helen Harrgrave.
Recitation—"The Round Table."
Song—"Vivian, Countess, Laura, Minnie."
Recitation—"The Round Table."
Recitation—"Maude Foster."
Dance—"Kathleen Currier, Christine Anderson, Margaret Smith and Aloise Vennally."
The dialogue was "Enter-Enter."
Recitation—"The Round Table."
Recitation—"Alma Nunnally."
Song—"Class."

Recitation—"Christine McEachern."
The room was decorated with Christmas bells, red and green paper and a beautiful Christmas tree. The exercises were enjoyed by all.

Dr. Toelnel and Mr. Slaton Visit Edgewood School

"Why all the fuss?" some ask. Then they realize that Christmas is coming. It is almost time for the Normal school girls to congregate in little groups to sing and play. In spite of the cold school some go cheerfully as if it was the most beautiful season of the year.

Dr. Toelnel visited us Monday and Tuesday with his friend, Dr. Sever, who is from the far north. Mrs. Slaton visited us Friday. He gave an

ORATORS FOR CHRISTMAS EXERCISES

Much interest centers about the Christmas oratorical contest of the Boys' High school which will be held at the auditorium-armory Monday morning at 11 o'clock. Classes from practically every school in the city have been invited to be present.

The imposing looking orator on the right is Robert L. Foreman, the declaimer from the third grade. Foreman will put up a hard fight for the declaimer's medal, but will be given a tough race by Grist of the second grade. The two speakers shaking hands are Charles H. Girardeau and Richard W. Courts, the opposing declaimers from the senior class. The best prophets have been asked to say which of these would win. Those at the bottom are, left to right: Girardeau, Little, Courts, Goldberger, Foreman, Grist, Johnson, Williams, Stokes.

OWEN'S BY TELLS OF SOCCER BALL IN GRAMMAR SCHOOLS

BY HARRY L. OWENSBY.

Soccer football has taken hold among the boys of the grammar schools. It is a game that develops the body as well as the mind and is very exciting after one learns the points and plays.

Soccer football teams are composed of eleven men. The object of the game is to carry the ball across the field by passing their opponents and kicking it between two points twenty feet apart. The large three-year loving cup of the Peeples School is played every Tuesday. The game is played every Tuesday. The large three-year loving cup of the Peeples School is played every Tuesday. The game is played every Tuesday.

Among the players of this season have been developed some terrific kickers. The boys are making brilliant plays at all times, kicking the ball from angles and passing it with both head and feet in professional style and making very few fouls.

When a game is won it is by cooperation of the players, for no individual player can win a game alone, although he may be a star. It requires every player to do his part and play his position, for at any moment the ball may be passed to his side of the field.

Our new book, "The Idylls of the King," will tell us more of these charming stories.

The officers of the society are: Jerome Moffatt, president; Gladys Reid, secretary; Willie Belle Pomeroy, secretary.

Dr. W. D. Weatherford, of Vanderbilt university, Nashville, Tenn., was with us this week. He is one of the leaders of the Blue Ridge movement, Dr. Weatherford is greatly interested in the Y. W. C. Maybe that raid of the English coast was a reminder to prospective recruits.

Monte Carlo is to have a rival, but then everything in Europe just now is a gamble.

It would appear that meat and bread would be the commodities most in demand from this time on.

Beef, a Luxury.

There is a broad salubrious fact for the production of Mr. Henry J. Williamson, statistician of the federal Department of Agriculture, that beef in the United States will be a rarity before the European war is over. For ten years, he explains, our number of cattle has diminished and our population increased progressively, until now another ten years will be required to restore anything like equality between supply and demand. A condition that has long been manifest is made more pronounced by the ever-increasing exports of American beef to the belligerent nations of Europe. It is altogether reasonable to expect that this staple will be listed among luxuries.

Disconcerting though it is to the rank and file of consumers such a prospect should prove a keen incentive to cattle raising in the South. There are few, if any other regions of the United States where live stock can be produced so cheaply or where the natural resources for animal husbandry are so abundant. In Georgia, for example, mild winters and many fine grasses would reduce to a minimum the expense of housing and feeding cattle. This State has thousands of acres admirably suited to that purpose, land which is now unused but which could be bought cheaply and turned to highly profitable account.

Big ranches could be established in the South with bright assurance of success, but it is not necessary to wait upon large enterprises of that kind to develop the South's live stock opportunities. The individual farmer can render important service by devoting a part of his land and energy to cattle and hogs and poultry. If he raises only enough to supply his own family's needs, he will be contributing to the agricultural welfare of the South; but he can go further and produce a surplus sufficient to bring him ready cash and to help the entire community.

Secretary Houston, of the national Department of Agriculture, well says in his annual report that we have been considering the meat supply of the nation too exclusively in terms of the big ranch and beef animals.

"The largest hope for a considerable increase in our meat supply," he adds, "lies in four other directions: First, in the use of profitable handling of the public grazing lands; second, in systematic attention to the production of beef animals in the settled farming areas of the country, particularly in the South; third, in increased attention to the smaller animals, such as swine and poultry; and fourth, in the control and eradication of the various hog cholera and other animal diseases and pests."

"Systematic attention to the production of beef in the settled farming areas, and increased attention to swine and poultry"—there lie the South's special need and opportunity. The Department of Agriculture states that while the average farm in Iowa has six milch cows, in North Carolina and Alabama it has less than two, and in South Carolina, only one; that while the average Iowa farm has thirty-five hogs, in North Carolina and Alabama it has less than five, and in South Carolina less than four; and that while the average Iowa farm has more than one hundred and eight head of poultry, in North Carolina and Alabama it has less than twenty and in South Carolina less than seventeen.

This is proportionately true of Georgia, and all other parts of the South; and yet, the natural resources of these States are exceptionally favorable for animal husbandry. Instead of lagging, the South should lead the country in the production of meat supplies.

Now that a curtailment of the cotton acreage, and increased production of foodstuffs are imperative, there is reason to believe that the South will utilize its rich opportunities for raising live stock. If it does so, the profits of its farms will be multiplied, and every interest of its economic affairs will be advanced.

Whatever else can be said about the weather, it must be admitted that it is typical.

Germany's Daring Sea Raid.

Germany's naval raid upon the Yorkshire coast of England, deserves a chapter all its own in the tales of sea adventure. To steal from a shelter on the enemy was supposed to keep frowning and unbroken watch, to elude an enveloping patrol of hostile ships, risk the peril of unguessed mines, reach a shore hundreds of miles away and strike damaging blows—to accomplish all this and then dash home again is a stirring exploit, meager though its practical results may be.

Except for wandering cruisers here and there, Germany's fleet has clung prudently to Wilhelmshaven since the war began. It has been powerless to protect its own nation's ocean commerce or seriously to interfere with that of the Allies. British merchantmen go and come almost as securely as in times of peace, and British army transports bring reinforcements to France from every quarter of the world. Nor has the island Kingdom been much concerned over threatened invasions by air or water. It has rested upon the assurance that its navy is a bulwark against all foes.

Now the daring feat of the German raiders weakens the basis of that confidence. In the attack upon the Yorkshire coast toward a forerunner of more ambitious movements and more serious dangers to England? The most trustworthy opinion is in the negative. "Unless all naval history has taught falsely," says a writer in the New York Herald, "invasion is rarely contemplated and never executed in the absence of a command of the sea, or unless help is to be depended upon from the country to be entered. Great Britain and France command the sea as never before commanded. While this is maintained—even more, so long as any allied fleet still floats 'in being,' as the term goes—any invasion is not only impossible but should be unthinkable. This assertion is based not on sentiment but on mathematical and strategic certainties that have never failed—on conditions now, as of old, controlling war at sea."

If this is true, the bold dash of the German raiders across the North Sea is more interesting than important. Their purpose evidently was to alarm England, the actual damage they might do being rather an incidental motive. The larger effect of the raid, however, as far as England is concerned, seems to be anger rather than apprehension, a wave of public feeling that has acted as magic in increasing army enlistments.

The Logic of Building Now.

"The business world nothing is more certain than that periods of depression will be followed by periods of activity and advancing prices. We have been passing through a period of depression in which prices for nearly all manufactured products have been extremely low. Building work can be done to a greater advantage at the present time and at much less cost than will be possible when the next burst of activity comes. At present, men are seeking work. Manufacturers of lumber, brick, cement, iron, steel and other building materials are hunting for customers, and hunting hard to find them. But the time will come when work will be hunting for the workers, and when buyers of building material will be hunting the manufacturers, and often paying a bonus or premium to get what they wish."

Thus the Manufacturers' Record summarizes an industrial condition that is deeply important to everyone who has planned to build sooner or later; and the facts indicated leave no doubt that the sooner such plans are acted upon the better it will be for individual as well as community interests. The business apathy that came over the United States at the outbreak of the European war is fast disappearing. The country as a whole is astir with new energy and confidence. It is merely a matter of months when conditions will be not only normal again but more prosperous than for many years.

When that time comes, labor will be comparatively scarce instead of plentiful, and the prices of building material will certainly be higher. The man who waits to build until the high tide of activity is in will find that he has lost a rare advantage and incurred considerable cost. This interim between the depression that is all over and the booming times not far ahead affords investment opportunities that may never return. The Manufacturers' Record logically concludes that the thousands of people who intend to build cottages or business houses and who are already able to finance construction work, but who are holding back on purely speculative grounds may pay dearly for their delay. "Far better build it be for them to build now than get the benefit of low prices of lumber and materials, and at the same time help to improve the whole business situation by employing labor and buying material."

CITY UNIVERSITIES

By Frederic J. Haskin

The newest development of university work, and one which is certain to prove of great practical value, is that of municipal universities. These are the American cities. These institutions will do the same work for the cities which the state universities are doing for the state. In addition to the regular educational facilities in advanced education, the university will be an integral part of the city itself and will enter directly into the activities of the city. The first cities to establish distinct universities for their municipalities were Chicago, Cincinnati and New York have been the first cities to establish distinct universities for their municipalities. Several other cities are now following the same route. In others the same results will be aimed for by forming a close cooperation between the municipality and the university already existing.

The New Association of urban universities is the name of the organization just effected for the purpose of forwarding the city university movement. It sprang into existence at the meeting of the National Association of State Universities held in Washington in November. It is already receiving the strong cooperation and support of other organizations and also of the great institutions and many prominent educators. Its membership now includes representatives of the Universities of Akron, Cincinnati and Toledo in Ohio, Johns Hopkins University of Baltimore, the James Milliken and Northwestern universities of Illinois, the Universities of Buffalo and New York, the University of Chicago, the University of Cincinnati, the University of Portland college, Oregon.

The most direct example of the practical manner in which the university can help the municipality is furnished in the report just completed by Prof. Fred Haskin, of the College of Engineering of the University of Akron, regarding the pavements of that city. The investigation was conducted by special request of the city and the results are so well accurate information to aid in "adopting some greater method of efficiency in the paving of the city and a reduction of cost to the city."

The youth of the College of Engineering made the work of the university in this connection. The students of civil engineering from the University of Cincinnati were enlisted and a careful inspection made of every foot of pavement in the city of Akron. The results were made in the university laboratory of various kinds of paving materials. The full report contained comparative costs and other expert testimony supplied to any city and calculated to insure a higher standard of efficiency in the paving of the city and to save large sums in future expenditure.

Commissioner (Claxton) of the United States bureau of education, is enthusiastic over the possibilities of the university in providing high education for those who cannot afford to go elsewhere. The last report of the work of the University of Cincinnati shows that 61 per cent of the students enrolled in the institution could not have secured the education had it not been provided them in their own city. Over 22 per cent were backward and the remainder of the students of the others were in the so-called professional class. Most of them were in the mechanical or small commercial class. Fully 38 per cent of the male students have followed some gainful occupation regularly throughout the year. The university extends its opportunities to those by co-operative courses and day and evening classes.

The University of Akron has extended its advantages in a most practical way by opening up regular classes for the young men and women employed in Wall street and other commercial centers. The classes open immediately at the close of business hours and instruction is given in all the branches adding commercial subjects including such subjects as bookkeeping, stenography, shorthand, and typewriting. The student is employed upon that subject if he enters upon a regular course of study entitling him to a diploma. The University of Akron has a number of other commercial schools, which is scholastically equivalent to an A. B. degree from a college of arts and sciences.

The success of the city university will depend upon its meeting the peculiar needs of the industrial conditions of the city. The University of Akron, if steel and iron works provide the principal industry, the university must first aim to provide training for those who desire to attain scientific efficiency in some particular branch of the industry. Since most of the students must support themselves while taking this training, the instruction must be given at suitable hours and credit for shop work must be given after the new commercial course of the University of New York.

The success of the efforts to establish vocational work in connection with the manual training or technical education of the city people cannot be overestimated. In a number of cities it is now possible for a boy to do paid apprenticeship work in some trade or industry while attending the city university, and thus support himself and prepare for his future work. The city university will give the vocational training to the highest point and permit a student to attain professional standards by the same method as he acquires apprentice skill during his school work.

At present, the courses in municipal universities are only in the industrial and commercial schools, but this limitation need be only temporary. Other professions can be provided for in the same manner. In an institution belonging directly to the municipality. The students taking these courses can frequently be given credit for the municipal service they perform. The University of Wisconsin has recently established a course in taxation. Last year a number of students in this course were employed in the state capital computing tax finances. They were paid $600 for a year's work and were also credited with the amount of time so employed.

With the ever increasing recognition of the need of securing the highest possible efficiency in every department of municipal control comes the need of increasing the number of trained experts even if it means the university, acting in close cooperation with all of these departments, should be better equipped to prepare men for the various municipal positions. The health departments require a large number of specially trained physicians each year. In this connection a municipal university, or a medical school already established may work out better. The establishment of an entirely new institution, or the co-operation must be definitely organized.

The work just completed in Akron is suggestive of the manner in which the municipal college can serve the city in addition to the more general work of supplying trained workers for city positions. The college can act as a center for practical work in the direction of the various public services long been recognized duty of every city. The university idea simply extends this service to prepare men and women for other branches of public service. The sociology and economics of every sort are required in the daily municipal routine and students can secure practical experience in many instances while doing the city a more efficient service than is now available.

The department of charities and correction in every large city gives exceptional opportunity for the student. In connection to acquire the experience of the necessity of placing public institutions of this kind under the direction of those who have had special training in becoming more acquainted with the sociological training alone, the city university is a co-operative work with the work of the municipality could be better than training that are not now available in any institutions.

MOTHER GOOSE

BY DR. FRANK CRANE.

(Copyright, 1914, by Frank Crane.)

Thousands, perhaps millions, of copies of "Mother Goose" are given to children during the Christmas holidays. It may be interesting to know something about this most popular of all books.

Its origin nobody knows. It was not created by any one genius. It has no author. Like Topsy, it "just grew."

There are two Mother Goose collections, the "Tales," and the "Rhymes and Jingles."

The "Tales" are properly cited, including "Cinderella," "The Little Red Riding Hood," "The Three Little Pigs," "The Boy Who Cried Wolf," "The Boy Who Stole the Butter," "The Boy Who Stole the Cheese," TELEPHONE SYSTEM FOR THE WEST POINT

Permission Granted Railroad to Do the Necessary Work in Atlanta.

The Atlanta and West Point railroad is preparing to construct a system of telephone and telegraph wires which will extend from Atlanta to points in Alabama and Georgia along the line of the right-of-way. The authority to use the board of streets for overhead and underground wire systems was granted by the city council on Friday, and it is understood that work will begin immediately. The company proposes placing wires along the west side of its road across Avenue Avenue, Ashby street, Atlanta, Gordon, Whitehall, McDonald, also underground along its roadway crossing Park street, Chastain, Nelson, also crossing Ashby street, Hill street, South Boulevard, Confederate avenue, Ordman street, Glenwood avenue, East Park street, Kirkwood avenue, Wylie street and Delta place.

The system will greatly improve the service, it is said, for the reason that telephones will be installed all along the line of the railroad. The company will use the board of streets for use in the handling and dispatching of freight.

It will take several months to complete the work planned in Atlanta, and it will give a great service to the electricians, linemen and laborers.

The authority was granted in a communication from President C. A. Wickham.

"DRY" LAW FOR NATION URGED BY SHEPPARD

Texas Senator Speaks in Favor of Amendment to the Constitution.

Washington, December 18.—Senator Sheppard, of Texas, co-author of the resolution for a national prohibition, urged its adoption today in the senate. Directing his argument against the objection which has been raised to the amendment that "it is an invasion of the states' rights," he contended that three-fourths of the states had a right to alter the constitution to affect the nation.

"I can understand," said he, "how an anti-prohibitionist, who believes that no unit of government should attempt to alter the liquor traffic, would oppose the amendment."

"I can understand," said he, "how an anti-prohibitionist, who believes that no unit of government should attempt to alter the liquor traffic, would oppose the amendment."
